Our Community

What's Your Biggest Homeschooling Challenge?

We asked thousands of homeschooling parents this question. Their top response?

"I don't know how to fit it all in!"

Parenting. Academics. Work. Homemaking. Personal care. Discipleship. Church. Family.

If one area is succeeding, it's only because everything else is toppling over in the background. (Or so it feels.)

You CAN conquer the overwhelm crisis!

That's what this is for...

Sign up today and we promise you'll have the perfect homeschool life that all your friends will be envious of.

Just Kidding!

You won't be strangled into perfection. But you will be empowered to rely on God's grace and seek His wisdom. Through our online video sessions and resource discounts, you will receive God-centered help and hope for:

Deciding what matters to your family

Defining a workable homeschool plan

Directing your path toward the eternal

... and all of this in the midst of real life happening.

Because as followers of Jesus Christ, our light can shine in the midst of the craziness to bring Him glory.

Are you ready?

Meet Your Hosts

Your hosts for Homeschool Summits meet with each speaker over video chat right at home (with kiddos nearby!) to hear their wisdom and ask them personalized questions — essentially your own personal guides through the Summit.

Get to know them a little here:

Daniel & Megan

"We first started homeschooling about 25 years ago... well, our parents did! As homeschool grads, we're enthusiastic about home education, discipleship, and the church, and we take that into our daily life. We desire to raise our family (three little ones so far!) to know and love Christ wholeheartedly, and we're grateful for every opportunity to share that passion with others!"

Kick-Off Keynote

The War on Children: How to Provide Shade for Your Children in a Corrupt Culture

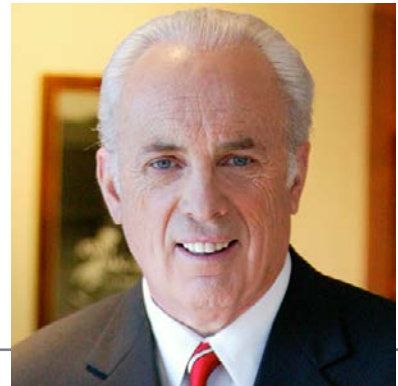

Things to Learn:

- How the culture has been weaponized to destroy our children
- Recognizing the main attack fronts and how Scripture combats them
- Action steps for protecting your children from the enemy

Takeaways:

- The enemy wants your children to accept the fallen world, to buy into the belief systems of the kingdom of darkness. Guard their hearts and guide them to the Kingdom of Light!
- Spiritual integrity is crucial to influencing your children. If you want them to see Christ and follow Him, you have to show Christ within yourself.
- The mind is the landing place of truth and lies — it is where holiness is cultivated and temptation takes root.

Notes:

DR. JOHN MACARTHUR

The Master's University

Dr. MacArthur has for 35 years provided leadership at The Master's University in Santa Clarita, California, and at The Master's Seminary, which is on campus at Grace Community Church in Sun Valley, where he has served as pastor-teacher for 52 years. He is the voice of the international radio and television ministry Grace To You; author or editor of over 150 books on Christian theology, ethics, living, and biblical exposition and doctrine — including commentaries on every book of the New Testament, the MacArthur Study Bible, which has been translated into five languages with millions of copies in print, and most recently collaborating on the new Legacy Standard Bible translation. He has been married to his wife, Patricia, for 55 years, has four married children, and 15 grandchildren.

Charting Your Course

Struggling to Fit It All In? Maybe You've Got the Wrong Box

Things to Learn:

- Identifying core issues that make homeschooling feel overwhelming
- How to clarify your values and structure your schedule accordingly
- What's missing from conventional education

Takeaways:

- Modern education misses the core and foundation of what God wants our children to learn. The number one principle we need to teach our children is to fear God. As they grasp this, we will be able to use every other aspect of education as an important piece, part of the big picture of God's design for the world.
- Life application is a must! It gives children a sense of purpose and makes them excited about what they are doing.
- At the end of every day, ask yourself: Did we do the most important thing today?

KEVIN SWANSON

Generations

Homeschooled in the 1960s and 70s, Kevin Swanson and his wife, Brenda, have just finished homeschooling their own five children. Kevin has 43 years of experience in the homeschooling movement and serves as the director of Generations, a ministry he founded to strengthen homeschool families around the country. As a father who wants to leave a godly heritage for his own children, Kevin's passion is to strengthen and encourage the homeschooling movement all over the world and to cast a vision for generations to come. For the last 18 years, Kevin has hosted a radio program — Generations Radio — the world's largest homeschooling and biblical worldview program that reaches families across the US and in over 100 countries.

He has also authored several popular books for homeschoolers, including: Freedom, Apostate, Upgrade: 10 Secrets to the Best Education for Your Child, the Family Bible Study Guide series, and others.

Real Homeschool: Letting Go of Pinterest-Perfect and the Instagram-Ideal Homeschool

Things to Learn:

- Applying God's standards to our practical, day-to-day reality
- Combatting the expectation to be picture perfect
- What it means to "keep it real" in our homeschooling

Takeaways:

- We are not staging a photo — we are raising disciples! If we spend our time comparing ourselves to others, we will miss the call that God has for our lives.
- Women need to know God's Word so that they will be filled up with the truth. God equips us for what He calls us to do! And when it gets messy, it doesn't mean that we have missed God's calling, it means He is going to work through the messiness.
- Our behavior starts on the inside, in our relationship with God, and what people see is the overflow of what God is doing in our hearts.

Navigating the Journey through the Homeschool Buffet

Things to Learn:

- A framework for navigating the buffet of homeschool resources with wisdom
- How to make choices when it comes to curriculum approaches and teaching methods
- Evaluating homeschool groups, co-ops, and other extracurricular options

Takeaways:

- As you evaluate what your main goals in homeschooling are, you will be able to weed out curriculum that does not measure up to what you are aiming for.
- We want to acknowledge God in all of our ways — not just the spiritual realm but the entire existence of humankind.
- It's so important that our curriculum asks the “why” questions — not only the “what” questions — to teach our children to learn to think.
- Others may be able to teach or explain academics to our kids better than we could, but we have the opportunity to show our children how they can be used by God through learning academics.

Smooth Homeschool Sailing: Dad's Role in Charting the Course

Things to Learn:

- The four “ships” every family needs for fruitful homeschooling
- Balancing relationship building with your wife and each child
- Engaging in homeschooling in the midst of a busy work schedule

Takeaways:

- Dad's role is critical for the longevity and direction of homeschooling. You've got to chart a course for where you want to go, then set sail on the four ships (below) that help you have a fruitful life and homeschool.
- Worship: Reshape your priorities so that worship is at the top.
- Relationship: Make this your next priority, it is more valuable than education. Engage in family conflict and life and create the paradigm shift that you are building lasting relationships with your children.
- Discipleship: Be aware of your child's unique gifts. Train your child in the way of the Lord and navigate the course with him/her.
- Scholarship: Don't neglect it, but prioritize the other three ships first. Resist the temptation to become the task master.

Davis is an international speaker and advocate for home education and has a degree in mechanical engineering from Vanderbilt University and a master's degree from Purdue University. Davis is also the author of three illustrated children's books designed to instill a biblical worldview, Good Morning, God, A Light for My Path, and In the Beginning.

Charting Your Course

What Are the Big Rocks?

Things to Learn:

- How to encourage lifelong learning in your family culture
- Making God's priorities your priorities
- How to keep the big picture in view for regular days

Takeaways:

- Identify your "big rocks." If you do not put these into your schedule first, they will not fit in.
- Ask good questions as part of your own learning journey — and when your children sense that you love learning, they will follow you.
- Build your family up first through your own relationship with God. Give thanks when things prevent you from fitting it all in, because God is sovereign!
- Discover, feed, and encourage your children's desires. Comparison is the enemy of vision. Develop your own flavor and enjoy watching your kids be who God designed them to be.

Homeschooler to Homeschool Family Defender

Things to Learn:

- Key areas to remember when you begin homeschooling
- Understanding the importance of prayer
- Transitioning from homeschooling to life after homeschooling

Takeaways:

- One of the most important gifts we give our children is time and enjoying the time. Children spell love T-I-M-E
- Ultimately we have to trust God for the salvation of our children
- Teach children to learn to learn and love learning

The Homeschool Gameplan

The Essentials of a Christian Education

Things to Learn:

- Equipping your children to be “salt”
- Why a foundation in Genesis is pivotal for a believer in Christ
- Evaluating the pitfalls that face homeschool parents

Takeaways:

- Equip your children to be the salt of the earth by pouring into them the salt of the Bible.
- If you're taught to acquire a taste for something from when you are young, you will develop that taste and hunger for it. Thus, you need to teach your children to acquire a taste for things from the Lord, starting from when they are young.
- Train you kids to engage with culture while keeping to their faith through arguments, good questions, and knowledgeable answers.

Husband, father of five, and grandfather of 18, Ken has a heart for passing on a legacy of faith and truth to the next generation, as well as equipping others to defend their faith and share the message of salvation.

The Homeschool Gameplan

Five Principles That Can Help You Fit It All In

Things to Learn:

- Creating a game plan to stay sane and successful
- How our priorities compare — and contrast — to those in the modern education system
- Identifying when academics should be set aside

Takeaways:

- Live life as a glorious adventure!
- Align your priorities with God's priorities. God has a plan for you and each one of your children, but we are all called to be ambassadors for His Kingdom.
- Don't count the day as a wasted day when you do not get to everything you wanted to do. Choose the better part like Mary and worship Jesus. Don't be a slave of your expectations!

The Homeschool Gameplan

How to Create a Plan for Your School Year and Live to Tell About It

Things to Learn:

- Building a framework to fit everything in
- Balancing extracurricular activities to align with your priorities — and why saying “no” isn’t bad
- Safeguarding your priorities

Takeaways:

- Take time to discuss these topics as a family: the plan God has for you all, your priorities as a family, your family identity, and the reason for homeschooling.
- As Christians, we are to live an intentional life, not an activity driven life.
- Be aware of your individuality and needs, as well as your child’s individuality and needs.

Gina Burmeier has been homeschooling her three children for 15 years and has become familiar with different learning approaches and a wide variety of curriculum. She and her husband travel to conventions and she serves as a part-time consultant at the Rainbow office.

The Homeschool Gameplan

Techniques for Multi-Level Schooling

Things to Learn:

- Practical ways to maximize your teaching time each day
- Discovering your family's preferred planning method
- Finding time for the fun things with your kids
- Using a system so you don't get behind

Takeaways:

- If our way doesn't look like someone else's, it's not wrong. God has a path for each one of us and it's different for each person.
- Pursue delight-directed learning! It broadens horizons and gives more opportunities to your children.
- Life learning: make normal, everyday activities (such as grocery shopping) into educational experiences.
- Leave time for your children to pursue their passions! Honor Him with who you are and who your kids are.

The Homeschool Gameplan

Charting Your Way Through High School – Testing, Transcripts, and All That

Things to Learn:

- Ways to prepare for high school while still in the younger years
- Practical tips for parents transitioning into the “guidance counselor” role
- How to successfully teach high school, while still teaching elementary and middle school
- Setting graduation requirements, creating transcripts, navigating testing, and deciding if dual enrollment is right for you

Takeaways:

- The goal is not to just get through high school! It’s preparing your young adult for their next steps after high school.
- The transition years through high school are a time to move forward with your children, not only as their parent, but also as brothers and sisters in Christ. Take time to pray with and for them, listen, and be a guidance counselor.
- Assess both your student’s effort and their finished product. Find the things that motivate your kids — know their strengths, weaknesses, and God given gifts.
- In high school, your role changes from teacher to an administrator in the sense that the student can do more for themselves.

JANICE PRICE & DEANNE CRAWFORD

Rainbow Resource

Homeschooling is a way of life for Janice Price — she has consulted at Rainbow since 2003, and homeschooled her own three children for 20 years (from kindergarten through high school graduation) before that. Married to Scott for 39 years, their three children are all university graduates and their seven grandchildren are now second-generation homeschoolers. Janice has worn various related hats — coordinator of a new-to-homeschooling support group, consultant for Westbridge Academy, administrator of Peoria Co-Operative Academy; and exhibit hall coordinator for the local homeschool convention. Janice has a B.A. from Phillips University and a M.Ed. from Idaho State University.

Deanne Crawford began her homeschool journey in 1997, graduating her youngest in 2013. Blessed with children on both sides of the learning spectrum, she adapted her homeschool to best meet their individual needs in light of their future aspirations. Today, her daughter is a registered nurse and her son attends community college and works for a Christian talk radio channel. Believing that homeschooling was a tremendous blessing for her family, she confesses it was also the most challenging thing she has ever done. Deanne joined Rainbow in 2011 and is passionate about encouraging and equipping the next generation of homeschoolers.

Why Choosing Curriculum Using Discernment is a Must!

Things to Learn:

- Why biblical discernment is needed for curriculum
- Learn what the Bible says about curriculum
- Tips for choosing curriculum with a God-centered approach

Takeaways:

- We can stumble upon our own biases. We need to be careful about letting what we want or grew up with influence what God's word says when picking out curriculum
- When we put our children under a curriculum we are putting them under the authority of the curriculum. Therefore, we want the curriculum to be godly based, biblically based, and point to the Creator
- It is worth it! You will have hard days. Days you make the wrong decision. Curriculum fails. But always remember, it is worth it!

Attention: Obsessive-Compulsive Perfectionist Control-Freaks, Chill Out!

Things to Learn:

- Lies that homeschool moms believe
- Why slowing down IS the answer
- How to listen to your children
- Tips for being in fellowship with God

Takeaways:

- Stop trying to do everything. The culture wants us to believe we can do everything: gourmet meals, perfect house, perfect clothes, perfect hair. But we can't. You are not called to exhaustion.
- Ignore the competition of others, and the competition found on social media, by praising God.
- Be intentional about building a relationship with your child. Step into their world and they will begin to pour their heart out to you over time.
- We bind ourselves in our own chains, LIVE in the freedom you have been given.

Management for Moms: Friendly Advice From a Homeschool Vet

Things to Learn:

- How to juggle the pins of a normal homeschool day
- How to preserve time to care for both your husband and yourself
- Developing strategies to simplify the basics

Takeaways:

- House cleaning is not only mom's job. "If they're old enough to walk, they're old enough to work."
- Keep the "home" in "homeschooling." Don't let extra activities get into competition with the priorities of your homeschooling. Work within the rhythms of the season of life your family is in right now.
- It is more important to pass the great love test, than to pass the white glove test!

God-Centered Curriculum: How It's Different, and Why It Matters

Things to Learn:

- Recognizing the trap of productivity glorification
- How to rightly view your use of time
- Why walking in the Spirit is key

Takeaways:

- The little interruptions of life are not keeping you from your work; they ARE your work. Redefine your definition of productivity so you can keep your sanity and your happiness.
- Let your kids make a mess. Let them make a mistake. Partner with them and teach them through the messy mistakes.
- The most important thing to teach your kids is the sovereignty of God.

Fitting it All in Your Budget

Things to Learn:

- How to fit it all into your budget, even as a one-income family
- Setting and meeting your financial goals
- Planning for how to handle financial discussions in your marriage and family

Takeaways:

- You must change the heart of the issue and make it into a lifestyle so that you don't fall back into your old patterns.
- Our priorities become visible in the way that we budget. As we re-examine our budget, we are re-examining our priorities.
- Let budgeting bring you together as a family! You are a whole family, working on this together. Allow your children to be involved in setting goals.

Homemaking Tips and Tricks for the Busy Homeschool Mom

Things to Learn:

- The beauty of decluttering
- How to set up a system that works for you in the midst of the busy
- Why you don't have to be a natural at homemaking skills

Takeaways:

- Being a successful homemaker is not about being perfect or doing everything all the time, but being faithful. The point is that we can't do it all. We need God.
- Teach your children to do their work thoroughly, cheerfully, diligently — work is a privilege given to us by the Lord. Practice this same attitude in yourself. Honor Him with your work.
- Commit even the little or mundane things (like laundry, cooking, and cleaning) to the Lord.
- Lean into Christ when the day is hard, when nothing goes right, and we don't see success. He cares about the little things and your attitude. Take a moment and cry out to Him.

Home Management Strategies

Homeschooling on Empty: Biblical Principles for Relationships and Practical Tips for Home Management

Things to Learn:

- How to keep going when burnout happens
- Eliminating the causes of burnout
- Homeschooling with caregiving, new babies, and financial concerns

Takeaways:

- If you are feeling worn out in homeschooling, take time to remember why you are doing this in the first place and remember your priorities.
- Don't be afraid to stop and reevaluate. Change and mold your schedule so it works for you and your family.
- Ask for help! Maintain regular accountability as spouses to help each other. Fill your heart with Scripture. Help each other as a family when things are difficult.
- God brings you through your troubles; He doesn't leave you helpless.

Walking By The Spirit

Things to Learn:

- The role of the Holy Spirit in the life of the believer
- What happens when spirit led living becomes evident in the life of a family
- What are some traps or substitutes that homeschool families might fall into that distract us from the Holy Spirit

Takeaways:

- Do not let worldly things fill you up and influence your decisions. Rather, let the Holy Spirit fill you up and influence your decisions
- If you know Christ and are miserable, you are grieving him with your sin. You are trying to live out Christainty with your own energy. You are letting rules of legalism and religion guide your life rather than a living relationship with God by the power of the Holy Spirit. It is time to lay that all down at the foot of the cross, submitting to the Lord. Ask the Lord to find your delight in Him. Let your satisfaction be in Him
- Because of the Holy Spirit, we are able to find love, joy, and peace in times of suffering simply by delighting in the Lord each day

How to Be Happily Married While Homeschooling

Things to Learn:

- How husbands can understand the burdens their wives face
- How wives can have something left for their husbands at the end of the day
- Why homeschooling can make your marriage stronger

Takeaways:

- Your marital health is foundational to your home and homeschooling. It's not selfish to spend time with your spouse. Instead, you are making things better and safer for your kids.
- In raising your kids, you are a team, and you need to trust your teammates. Create a safe space to communicate openly with each other.
- Don't put your spouses' needs after everybody else's.
- Engage on the academic side, communicate frequently and openly, and choose to cultivate the team spirit. If it's worth doing, it's worth investing in.

Laying Down the Rails

Things to Learn:

- Training your children to function as a team so that you work together to fit it all in
- Why habits are good for your children (and you!)
- How habits affect your children's character

Takeaways:

- Instilling good habits in our children will help them all throughout their adult lives! The habits of attention, obedience, and truthfulness are crucial.
- Focus on one habit at a time, but always keep an eye on the ones that are already formed. Habits are inevitable. Which ones are your children forming?
- As a homeschool mom, focus on habits such as a sweet temper, orderliness, etc. Ask the Lord, "What habits do I need to focus on?"

Raising Siblings With Kingdom Vision

Things to Learn:

- Defeating the spirit of jealousy within sibling relationships
- Learning to cultivate spiritual connection within sibling bonds
- How to truly apologize

Takeaways:

- The sibling relationship is the picture and image of Christian friendship, so Satan targets the sibling relationships first. He wants them to work separately and be filled with jealousy for one another; God wants siblings to work together and build spiritual connections.
- The oldest sibling sets the path for the others. When an older sibling leads a younger sibling astray, it is a discipleship situation not a discipline problem.
- God calls for siblings to come together for a kingdom mission!

Building Your Family Culture: Fitting in Life Outside of School

Things to Learn:

- How to unify your family to work together for the glory of God
- Learn what God's intentions are for how we spend our time
- How to make good entertainment choices
- Steps to training kids to work

Takeaways:

- Life is ultimately work, worship, rest, and rejoicing.
- Life integration is key to our homeschooling our kids in a way that will train them to enjoy work and experience life and ministry, even as children.
- Rest is important. Even though we live in an entertainment culture, we need a different understanding of rest based on the Word of God. When we rejoice before the Lord in our rest, we maximize the rest and pleasure that God has created and given to us. Train your children to enjoy entertainment in community.

Part 1 – Homeschooling Through Hard Times Part 2 – Extracurricular Activities! How to Make Wise Choices for Your Family

Things to Learn:

- How to thrive, not just survive, when God brings hardship to your family
- Strategies for engaging the difficulties of life as a family
- The importance of keeping your family (large or small) close to each other

Takeaways:

- A season of hardship may be a time to call your children up to things they are capable of but that you would not have asked them to do under different circumstances.
- Use mistakes as an opportunity to learn and grow and see how the Word of God is true!
- It is the duty of parents to help children learn discernment and reason through the Word of God and prayer. Equip them with things that will be a blessing to their future families and the church – for they have all been bought with the blood of Jesus.
- Children look up to their parents and see them as an example, so the way you serve and portray that service to them will have a big impact.

We Will Not Be Silenced: How Parents Can Respond Courageously

Things to Learn:

- How to detect the lies of the culture
- Equipping your children to not live in silence
- Passing on a courageous faith

Takeaways:

- Teach your children to detect the lies and propaganda of the culture and then lovingly stand for truth and take the consequences.
- Think of eternity and not just now. It is not necessary to win on earth to win in Heaven.
- Praying actual Scripture will revolutionize your life. You begin to lay ahold of God and discover new ways to intercede for your child.
- God has led us all to this hour. We are ready for it if we are ready to pay the price. He has not abandoned us but is here among us, ready to strengthen us if we humble ourselves and seek Him.

How to Face Your Fears and Stay Faithful to Your Eternal Priorities

Things to Learn:

- Biblical principles for faithfulness in the little things
- How to act as a fountain, not a drain
- Why you need to say “no”
- How blessings are waiting on the other side of your fears

Takeaways:

- It's natural to have fear — supernatural to have faith. God wants our faith; He wants us to believe that His promises are true, regardless of what makes sense to our physical sight. Fear is a time for our faith to rise.
- Respond with faith instead of control if we see our children making decisions that we did not expect or desire.
- When we see the battle before us from a spiritual perspective, we fight the battle against the real enemy rather than fighting against each other. Learn to see the battle from God's perspective!
- Help your kids overcome their fears through the blood of the Lamb and testimonies of God's faithfulness.
- We can turn the lights on for our kids so that they can see the truth.

Being a Woman of the Word

Things to Learn:

- The #1 thing homeschool families are lacking
- How to practically fit Bible reading into your day
- Steps to raising children who pray
- Understanding the excitement and relevance of our relationship with the Lord

Takeaways:

- The beautiful principle God gives us is to come to the Word morning and evening so that the flame never goes out.
- If we don't have a passion for the Word, we cannot pass it on to our children! His Word must be our greatest passion.
- If we do not feed our children's souls, they are not ready for the day. A meal of only physical food is only half a meal, we must feed their souls.
- Learn how to read the Word and journal so you do not forget.

What Will Your Legacy Be? Reflections of a Homeschooled, Homeschooling Mama

Things to Learn:

- Action steps to evaluating your homeschooling success with the right measuring stick
- How to assess time in light of eternal priorities
- Principles to leaving a legacy that matters in God's view

Takeaways:

- We cannot base our lives or our definition of success on what the world tells us. Instead, we should counsel our hearts with the truth of God's Word.
- Build a culture of meditating on and delighting in God's Word for your family!
- We are not looking for temporary success, but the long-term goal of generational faithfulness.

Notes:

RUTH ADAMS

Legacy

Ruth Adams is a homeschooled, homeschooling mama — home-educated herself in the 1970s and 1980s and now homeschooling her own seven children, she seeks to pass on the legacy of faith her parents imparted to her. She has an almost forty year perspective on the homeschooling movement and encourages parents to reach the hearts of their children with the Gospel of Jesus Christ. She offers warnings against falling into ditches along the way, while exhorting parents to take a biblically-balanced approach to raising their children for the glory of God. Ruth understands the challenges and joys of being a homeschooling mama and loves mentoring other mothers who desire to disciple the hearts of their children for Christ.

Eternal Priorities

The Ultimate Goal of Education

Things to Learn:

- Action steps for dealing with discouragement
- How to accomplish our ultimate goal with unwilling children
- What to do when our children are grown and we realize we didn't have the proper goal
- Why harmony in marriage impacts our progress

Takeaways:

- We define success as self-centered rather than significant. We need to redefine our definition of success. True success is bringing honor and glory to God, not ourselves.
- Our kids know we are sinners, there's no hiding that. Be authentic with them. Repent in front of them when you are wrong and ask for their forgiveness if needed.
- Put your armor on each morning! Anticipate that the day will not go as you want but the Lord is sovereign.
- Pray together as husband and wife. If there is a problem with your child, take the time to evaluate and help your child. Create an environment where your children can come to you with anything.
- The Lord will take what we see as a tragedy and turn it around into a blessing.

EMEAL & RACHEL ZWAYNE

Living Waters

Emeal ("E.Z.") and Rachel Zwayne have home educated all five of their children from the time that each of them was old enough to begin learning. They have graduated their two oldest daughters (now 19 and 20 years old) and continue to home educate their younger children (who are 11, 14, and 15 years old).

In E.Z.'s capacity as a pastor for many years, and through his role as the President of Living Waters, he has ministered to families and individuals all across the world through his sermons, writings, training courses, movies, and international television program.

Rachel has mentored countless home-educating mothers through her writings, conference messages, and one-on-one discipleship.

Together, they share a passion for building up Christian families, while encouraging and inspiring them to live for the glory of God.
